Flooring is one of the most important design elements of any home. Not only does flooring need to prioritize practicality to endure heavy daily footfall, but its style will set the tone for the rest of the space, whether that's traditional, maximal, or rustic to name just a few.

There are so many flooring styles to choose from, spanning classic options that never date, to more experimental flooring that creates a vibrant and playful look. Here, we've rounded up eight flooring trends that designers expect will be the most prominent throughout 2024, catering to many different interior design styles.

Whether you're remodeling your bathroom and want to experiment with on-trend floor tiles or want to decorate with rugs to achieve a cozy bedroom, there are lots of flooring ideas here to give you some inspiration along the way.

The Top Flooring Trends For 2024

For 2024, flooring trends include timeless options that work seamlessly across many interior design styles for a pared-back look, as well as far more experimental flooring options. These playful styles – think brightly colored tiles and geometric designs – represent a wider shift in the design world in 2024 toward personality-led design.

1. MOSAIC TILES IN GEOMETRIC PATTERNS

Starting with mosaic tiles, more specifically those with geometric patterns, as shown above in this bathroom designed by Catherine Ebert Interiors. 'Patterned flooring has been very popular over the past few years and I expect to see that continue in 2024,' says designer Catherine Ebert.

'Mosaic tiles in geometric patterns are often a go-to for me, such as in this powder room because they animate the space in spaces where you cannot rely on rugs and furnishings to provide interest. Multi-colored marble mosaics have been really on the rise and I'm looking forward to using some with more curvilinear forms in the coming year!'
